Abstract: This research aims to explore and understand the role and importance of literacy in the context of Islamic teachings, as an effort to eliminate ignorance and increase awareness and understanding of mankind. Using a qualitative approach and textual analysis of primary and secondary sources, this study explores how Islam emphasized the importance of knowledge and literacy from the beginning of revelation, as well as its implications for the development of a civilized and knowledgeable society. The results of the study show that literacy, in the context of Islam, is not only limited to the ability to read and write, but also includes the ability to understand, analyze, and apply knowledge in daily life. The teachings of Islam, which commands its people to 'Iqra' or 'read' in the first revelation to the Prophet Muhammad (PBUH), affirm the urgency of literacy as the key to opening the door to wisdom and enlightenment. Furthermore, the study identifies various aspects of literacy emphasized in Islam, including religious literacy, scientific literacy, and social literacy, all of which contribute to the formation of individual character and the advancement of society. This study concludes that a deep understanding of the importance of literacy in Islam can be a foundation for overcoming the challenges of ignorance and encouraging holistic human resource development. Thus, efforts to improve literacy are not only limited to individual responsibility but also part of the collective obligation of Muslims to build a knowledgeable and dignified civilization.

Keywords: literacy, Islam education, ignorance, community development, civilized and knowledgeable.

INTRODUCTION

In literature reviews, many studies highlight the relationship between literacy levels religious understanding, and moral values [1]. It was found that individuals who had a higher level of literacy tended to have a deeper understanding of their religious teachings [2]. This shows the importance of efforts to increase literacy in the context of religion, especially Islam, as a way to eliminate the darkness of ignorance that is often the cause of narrow understanding and radicalism.

In this context, literacy in Islam is crucial [3]. Not only the ability to read the Qur'an but also to understand the meaning hidden behind the holy verses and apply them in daily life. A deep understanding of the teachings of Islam not only enlightens individuals but also paves the way to a more meaningful and meaningful life [4].

In this context, this journal aims to explore the importance of literacy in Islam as a tool to overcome the darkness of ignorance [5]. By understanding the teachings of Islam more deeply, it is hoped that individuals can achieve a higher awareness of religious values and apply them in their daily lives [6]. Through this study, it is hoped that ideas and strategies will emerge that can help increase literacy in Islam, as well as reduce the negative impact of the darkness of ignorance that hinders the development of the ummah and society [7].

Therefore, it is necessary to make continuous efforts to strengthen Islamic religious education so that the expected goals of Islamic religious education can be achieved properly [8]. To overcome the low religious ability or competence, it is necessary to be aware of the importance of implementing the design and/or implementation of Islamic religious education programs that allow the maximum re-strengthening of Islamic religious education [9].

In general, literacy is described as a person's ability to process and understand information when carrying out the process of reading and writing [10]. The National Institute for Literacy defines Literacy as "an individual's ability to read, write, speak, calculate, and solve problems at the level of skill required in work, family, and society." Thus, literacy does not only mean being able to read and write but also having skills and practising what has been learned so that the knowledge is beneficial for oneself and society [11].

However, civilization in the world cannot be separated from the ability to read and write human beings who lived in their time [12]. Human civilization was built following the development of human literacy [13]. Because one of the keys to the development of Islamic civilization is literacy itself [14].

Islam has known literacy since the first humans were revealed to the earth [15]. In the historical record during the golden age of Islam, it is inseparable from the scientific culture of reading, researching, writing, and discussing [16]. Islamic literacy experienced rapid development in the golden age of Baghdad during the caliphate of Harun al-Rashid (789-809). At that time, the intellectual movement was very intense where books as a source of knowledge were written and printed, thus allowing the public to gain knowledge more widely [17]. The intellectual movement was marked by a project to translate works in Persian, Sanskrit, Syriac, and Greek into Arabic. Starting with their work on science, philosophy, or literature [18].

Islamic literacy means learning the knowledge that has been revealed by Allah SWT to the Prophets and Messengers and then to the companions, and believers so that it reaches us Muslims [19]. Studying Islamic literacy is not only opening history books, but Islamic literacy is also part of the mindset, outlook on life, and identity of Muslims [20].

The Islamic literacy movement in schools is a participatory effort or activity that involves all components of the school environment, namely students, teachers, principals, education staff, school supervisors, School Committees, and parents/guardians of students [21]. In addition, it must also involve parties outside the school environment, including the community, the government, the mass media, and other parties [22].

In an increasingly complex modern society, the challenge of understanding and implementing religious teachings is increasing [23]. Islam as a religion that includes aspects of spiritual, social, and cultural life, places the importance of Islamic literacy as a priority [24]. However, many Muslim communities are still trapped in the darkness of ignorance due to a lack of understanding of the true principles of Islam.

Research on Islamic literacy is becoming increasingly important, especially in the information age where access to knowledge is very broad but often poorly managed [25]. In this context, literacy includes not only the ability to read and write, but also a deep understanding of the values, teachings, and principles that underlie the religion of Islam [26].

One of the important aspects of understanding Islamic literacy is the understanding of the Qur'an and Hadith, the main source of Islamic religious teachings [27], [28]. However, to be able to understand these texts correctly, it is necessary to have a good understanding of the Arabic language, historical context, and the right interpretation methodology [29], [30].

In addition, Islamic literacy also includes an understanding of concepts such as morals, fiqh, Islamic history, and various other areas of knowledge that are relevant to the daily lives of Muslims [31]. Having good literacy in Islam not only allows individuals to understand religious teachings correctly but also helps them to face contemporary challenges with a strong foundation of Islamic values [32].

However, there are still many Muslim communities that are not aware of the importance of literacy in Islam or have difficulty accessing quality knowledge sources [33]. Therefore, in-depth research on strategies and approaches to improve Islamic literacy is essential to overcome the darkness of ignorance that still surrounds most Muslims.

By deepening the understanding of the importance of literacy in Islam, it is hoped that the Muslim community can take a step towards a deeper and more applicable understanding of religion, and be able to answer the challenges of the times with solutions that follow pure Islamic values [34].

LITERATURE REVIEW

I would like to share with you a literature review that I compiled on the theme "Eliminating the Darkness of Ignorance: Understanding the Importance of Literacy in Islam". In this literature review, I seek an in-depth understanding of how literacy can be the key to enlightening Muslim societies and reducing the ignorance inherent in them.

I began by researching several references that highlight the important role of literacy in religious contexts. One of the interesting articles is the work of Ahmad and his colleagues (2018) which discusses the importance of literacy in enlightening the Muslim community [36]. They highlighted how reading and writing skills can help Muslims to better understand their religious teachings.

In addition, I also found an interesting book written by Khan (2020), which specifically raises the importance of Islamic education in improving the literacy and knowledge of Muslims. This book provides in-depth insights into how religious literacy and understanding are intertwined in shaping more educated and enlightened individuals [37].

In addition to these two references, I also found a conference that emphasized the close relationship between literacy and a correct understanding of Islamic teachings (Rahman, 2017). This conference provides a deep understanding of how religious knowledge and literacy abilities can complement each other in shaping moral and educated individuals [38].

My literature review also includes an analysis of how reading the Qur'an thoroughly can improve literacy and comprehension (Ali, 2019). This article underlines the importance of reading the scriptures deeply to gain a broader knowledge of the Islamic religion [39].

Overall, this literature review highlights how important literacy is in the Islamic context. Through a deep understanding of religion and good literacy, Muslim society can overcome the ignorance and darkness that exists within it [40].

METHODOLOGY

This research method uses a qualitative approach with a focus on case studies [41]. This research will involve the analysis of relevant literature, such as scientific journals, books, articles, and conferences related to literacy in the Islamic context. The initial stage of the research will involve the search and selection of appropriate sources that cover the topic of the importance of literacy in Islam [42].

Once the sources are selected, the research will pay attention to inclusion criteria that include relevance to the research topic, quality of the methodology, and contribution to the understanding of literacy in Islam. Data will be extracted from selected sources and analyzed using a descriptive approach [43].

Table 2. Research Methods on Eliminating the Darkness of Ignorance: Understanding the Importance of Literacy in Islam

No	Research Stages	Description
1	Problem Identification	Determining the main problems related to the darkness, ignorance, and lack of literacy in Islam.
2	Literature Review	Examining literature related to literacy in Islam, about the elimination of the darkness of ignorance.
3	Research Design	Establish appropriate research methods and approaches to understand the importance of literacy in Islam.
4	Data Collection	Collect data through surveys, interviews, or observations related to literacy and the darkness of ignorance in Muslim societies.
5	Data Analysis	Analyze the data that has been collected to find patterns, trends, and relationships between literacy and the darkness of ignorance.
6	Research Findings	Presenting research findings that illustrate the importance of literacy in eliminating the darkness of ignorance in the context of Islam.
7	Conclusion	Draw conclusions based on research findings and provide recommendations for further action.
8	Publication	Publish research results in scientific journals or related discussion forums to share knowledge with the academic and general public.

This study aims to investigate the challenges faced in overcoming the darkness of ignorance in the understanding of Islamic teachings and to understand the importance of literacy in illuminating the path to a deeper understanding. Through a mixed approach that combines in-depth interviews with religious leaders and surveys among Muslims, this study will uncover the key factors that influence the level of Islamic literacy [44], [45]. The literature review will provide a theoretical basis for understanding the role of the Qur'an and Hadith in Islamic literacy, as well as the practical challenges faced in improving literacy levels in modern society. By understanding the factors that affect Islamic literacy, it is hoped that this research can provide valuable insights for the development of effective strategies in overcoming literacy shortcomings in understanding Islamic religious teachings, as well as illuminating the path to a deeper and holistic understanding of Islamic values.

RESULTS AND DISCUSSION

In Islamic civilization, literacy has a very important role in spreading knowledge, strengthening faith, and eliminating ignorance [46]. Literacy is not only limited to the ability to read and write, but also includes an understanding of religious teachings, science, and practical skills. This article will explore the importance of literacy in Islam and how literacy can eliminate the darkness of ignorance among Muslims.

1. The relationship between Literacy and Religion

Literacy in Islam is not only the ability to read the Quran but also to understand and practice its teachings. The Qur'an itself emphasizes the importance of science and reflection in many of its verses, inviting Muslims to think about the signs of Allah's greatness in the universe. Thus, literacy is not only a means of learning but also a way to get closer to understanding its creation.

2. Overcoming Ignorance with Literacy

Ignorance is the main enemy in achieving individual and societal progress. With literacy, Muslims can overcome this ignorance through continuous learning. Literacy provides access to diverse sources of knowledge, be it through reading, discussion, or other media. By broadening their horizons and knowledge, Muslims can face the challenges of the times more wisely.

3. Literacy in Everyday Life

Literacy is not only relevant in religious contexts but also in daily life. With literacy, Muslims can be more independent in understanding religious teachings, make better decisions in social and economic life, and contribute positively to community development. Literacy also opens the door to discoveries and innovations, which can improve the overall quality of life of Muslims.

4. The Role of Education in Improving Literacy

Education has a central role in increasing literacy among Muslims. Islamic schools, religious education institutions, and community literacy programs are important means of developing literacy skills. In addition, the government, non-governmental organizations, and individuals can also play a role in providing access to education and literacy for all groups.

In the context of Islam, literacy is not only a reading and writing skill, but also a way to deepen understanding of religious teachings, improve the quality of life, and overcome ignorance. By strengthening literacy among Muslims, we can eliminate the darkness of ignorance and bring the light of knowledge and a deep understanding of religion and life. Therefore, all parties need to play an active role in advancing literacy in the context of Islam.

CONCLUSION

In an in-depth study on Eliminating the Darkness of Ignorance: Understanding the Importance of Literacy in Islam, it was found that literacy has a very important role in advancing the religious understanding and social progress of Muslims. The concept of literacy in Islam includes not only the ability to read and write but also to understand and interpret sacred texts such as the Quran. From the history of Islam, it can be seen that literacy has become the foundation for the development of Muslim civilization, and its relationship with the Qur'an strengthens the importance of expanding literacy in Muslim societies. By understanding religious literacy, Muslims can deepen their understanding of Islamic teachings and strengthen their religious identity. However, the challenges in improving the literacy of Muslims cannot be ignored, including limited access to education and the need for more effective strategies to teach religious literacy. In conclusion, literacy in Islam is not just a skill, but also a means to dispel the darkness of ignorance and bring the light of knowledge. By prioritizing literacy in Muslim societies, we can open the door to a deeper understanding of religion and bring about positive change in the lives of individuals as well as society as a whole. In addition, our findings suggest that literacy in Islam has a positive impact on various aspects of life, including education, economy, health, and society. Individuals who have a high level of Islamic literacy tend to have a greater awareness of moral and ethical values and can contribute positively to the development of their communities. Our conclusions highlight the need for greater efforts to improve literacy in Islam at various levels of society. Investments in formal and non-formal education are needed that promote a deep understanding of Islamic teachings and their application in daily life. In addition, there is a need for support from the government, educational institutions, and society to create an environment that supports the growth and development of Islamic literacy. Thus, we believe that increasing literacy in Islam will not only provide benefits for individuals personally but will also bring a wide positive impact on society and Muslims as a whole.
